

Brooks, Jennifer

From: Aurora Recording [quality@aurorarecording.com]
nt: Friday, December 09, 2005 7:32 AM qrulepubliccomments
Subject: New CDC Rules for Flying

Hello,

I am a frequent flyer and I wanted to comment on some of your proposed new rules.

1. Letting the CDC have people's email addresses and other personal information (who they are flying with, etc), is a BAD IDEA. Please do not enact it.
2. Detaining people for health screening who appear to be obviously ill may be a good idea. Screening/testing should be a quick process, and people who prove to be healthy should be put on the next available flight, though.
3. How about requiring airlines to increase the circulation of FRESH AIR in the airplane? This is badly needed and would cut down on the transmission of many diseases.

Sincerely,

Steve Dean